

Winds prompt air warning for Valley

Stockton Record, Tuesday, Oct. 14, 2014

Gusty winds have prompted air quality officials to issue a health warning for the entire San Joaquin Valley, including the Stockton area.

The warning extends through today.

Winds may produce dust, which can result in unhealthy concentrations of tiny particulate matter. Exposure to particulate pollution can cause serious health problems, aggravate lung disease, trigger asthma attacks and bronchitis, and increase risk of respiratory infections.

The warning was issued by the San Joaquin Valley Air Pollution Control District.
