

New heat record set Monday in Fresno

Staff reports

The Fresno Bee, Monday, March 30, 2015

Monday's high of 89 degrees in Fresno broke the previous mark of 85, which was set in 2003, the National Weather Service reported.

But the record-breaking heat has ended, at least for this week. Tuesday's high will be 77, and high temperatures for the rest of the week won't exceed 80 degrees, the NWS said.

Good air quality will continue, said the weather service.
